Numb. 422.

THE Pennſylvania GAZETTE.

Containing the freſheſt Advices Foreign and Domeſtick.

From January 6. to January 13. 1736,7.

Nothing more like a Fool than a drunken Man.
Poor Richard.

'TIS an old Remark, that Vice always endeavours to aſſume the Appearance of Virtue: Thus Covetouſneſs calls itſelf Prudence; Prodigality would be thought Generoſity; and ſo of others. This perhaps ariſes hence, that Mankind naturally and univerſally approve Virtue in their Hearts, and deteſt Vice; and therefore, whenever thro' Temptation they fall into a Practice of the latter, they would if poſſible conceal it from themſelves as well as others, under ſome other Name than that which properly belongs to it.

But DRUNKENNESS is a very unfortunate Vice in this reſpect. It bears no kind of Similitude with any ſort of Virtue, from which it might poſſibly borrow a Name; and is therefore reduc'd to the wretched Neceſſity of being expreſs'd by diſtant round-about Phraſes, and of perpetually varying thoſe Phraſes, as often as they come to be well underſtood to ſignify plainly that A MAN IS DRUNK.

Tho' every one may poſſibly recollect a Dozen at leaſt of the Expreſſions us'd on this Occaſion, yet I think no one who has not much frequented Taverns would imagine the number of them ſo great as it really is. It may therefore ſurprize as well as divert the ſober Reader, to have the Sight of a new Piece, lately communicated to me, entitled

The Phraſes in this Dictionary are not (like moſt of our Terms of Art) borrow'd from Foreign Languages, neither are they collected from the Writings of the Learned in our own, but gather'd wholly from the modern Tavern-Converſation of Tiplers. I do not doubt but that there are many more in uſe; and I was even tempted to add a new one my ſelf under the Letter B, to wit, Brutify'd: But upon Conſideration, I fear'd being guilty of Injuſtice to the Brute Creation, if I repreſented Drunkenneſs as a beaſtly Vice, ſince, 'tis well-known, that the Brutes are in general a very ſober ſort of People.

London, Sept. 4. 'Tis certain, the Grand Signior is in the utmoſt Diſtreſs on every Side: As for the Grand Vizir's Army at Bender, there is undoubted Accounts, that a Terror has already ſpread itſelf amongſt them, and that ſeveral Thouſands have deſerted. The Grand Vizir, by the Deſcription of him, ſeems to be very little able to animate his Troops, having been bred up in the Softneſs and Indolence of the Seraglio.

The Count d'Oſtein, Envoy Extraordinary from the Court of Vienna, has declared to the Czarina's Miniſters, That if the Emperor and the Maritime Powers cannot ſucceed by their Mediation in accommodating the Differences betwixt Ruſſia and the Porte, his Imperial Majeſty will, without more Delay, join his Troops to thoſe which the Czarina deſigns to employ againſt the Turks.

Extract of a Letter from Madrid.

As the Number of Convents of Benedictines and Bernardines is very conſiderable in Spain, and as the Revenues of thoſe Convents infinitely ſurpaſs what the Monks really ſtand in need of, we are aſſured that the Court has taken a Reſolution to retrench the Number of them, to cauſe their Revenues to be adminiſtred by Commiſſioners from the King, and to aſſign each Convent a Fund in Proportion to the Quantity of Monks it contains. It is added, That the King has ſent to the Pope for his Conſent to this Regulation, and his Holineſs's Anſwer is daily expected.

The Wife of a Fellow, formerly a Sailor, but who lately ply'd as a Porter in Southwark, dying a Member of a Woman's Club, by whoſe Articles they were to pay 40 s. to the Heir or Executor of every deceas'd Perſon, he went to the Stewards of the Club, received the 40 s. and, to ſave the Expence of a Funeral, ſold the Body to a Surgeon for two Guineas, and, equipping himſelf with the Money, went off to Sea.

London, September 11.

The following Account from Petersburg, will afford the Reader ſome Idea of the great Improvement in the Sciences made of late Years in the Ruſſian Empire.

ON the 1ſt of Auguſt, O. S. the Perſian Ambaſſador Chalef-Mirſa-Caſſi, accompany'd by Migir-Ali-Bec, a Lord of Dagheſtan, went to ſee the Curioſities in the Academy of Sciences at Petersburg. They firſt entered into the Court where the Gymnaſium ſtands, in which they ſaw the Scholars with their Tutors. From thence they went up into the ſecond Story, and ſaw the Philoſophical and Mathematical Inſtruments; after which they proceeded into the Apartment where Experiments are made in Natural Philoſophy, and ſaw ſome performed with the Air Pump, to their great Surprize and no leſs Satisfaction. In another Room they ſaw the various Ways of ingraving, with Aqua Fortis, by the graving Tool, and otherwiſe and were preſented with Pictures of the Czarina and all her Auguſt Family, drawn on the Spot. They were then carried to the Printing-Houſe, where where they were shewn the Characters of almost all the Languages in Europe, and presented with Verses in the Persian Language, composed and worked off in their Sight. From thence they went into the Library, the Anatomical Theatre, the Cabinet of Natural Curiosities, &c. and after having spent five Hours in viewing the Whole they went to their Quarters with evident Marks of Satisfaction.

Some Armenian and Grecian Merchants arrived at Dantzick from Choczin. say, the Turks of that Country are under an unexpressible Consternation, insomuch that they are sending their Effects to Constantinople, or beyond the Danube, and look upon all Turkey on this Side of the Danube and the Black Sea to be lost, if the War holds but ten Months longer.

September 25. The Czarina and her whole Court are returned from Petershof to Petersburg in order to comfort the distressed Inhabitants with their Presence, and to take Measures for their Relief. The three Streets that are laid in Ashes, which before were narrow, are now to be made into two, which are to be thirty Feet wide.

The Emperor, as an Acknowledgment of the Zeal which the Duke of Modena shewed for him in the late War, has generously given him the Country of Novellara to be added to his Dominions.

The Inhabitants of Milan distinguished themselves with very uncommon Rejoicings the Day their City was delivered up to the Imperialists, a Cry coming from every Quarter of Long live the Emperor our old Master, and they had Illuminations and Rejoicings for three Days together.

October 5. The Right Hon. Sir Charles Wager is so well recovered, that he sits up and receives Visits from his Relations and particular Friends, but does not as yet see Company publickly.

BOSTON, December 9.

We have the following melancholy Account from Hadley, viz. That something more than a Week ago, a small Out-house, belonging to the Rev. Mr. Chauncey, Minister of that Town, was consumed by Fire, and in it a young Gentleman, one of Mr. Chauncey's Sons. This young Gentleman had a liberal Education, and had preached for some Time, but of late was under a great Degree of Distraction, which obliged his Father to confine him in the House or Building now consumed, where he used frequently in the Night Time to cry Fire in a most vehement Manner, without the least Occasion; which was the Reason why the Family took no Notice of his Cries when the Building was really on Fire.

From the County of Hampshire, we hear, That a great many Cattle have lately died there in the Fields, occasion'd, (as is suppos'd) by their eating smutty Corn; of which they have had this Year a greater Plenty than usual.

We are informed that some Days ago Mr. Mark How of Ipswich buried his eighth Child of the Throat Distemper.

We also hear that Mr. John Abbot, a Neighbour of the said Mr. How's, has lately buried a like Number of Children, soon after which Mr. Abbot's Father, aged near 90 Years, dyed of the same Distemper.

The beginning of this Week arrived here Capt. Bean from Antigua, but last from Coracoa, who informs, That in his Passage to that Place, he was taken by two Vessels mann'd with Spaniards, who shot his Mate dead assoon as they came on board, and then carried his Ship into Porto Rico, where he was detain'd by the Governor six Days; and after they had plundered the Vessel to a considerable Value, the Governor ordered him to depart in an Hour's Time, not suffering him to take in fresh Water, which he stood in great need of.

New-York, Decem. 20. We hear from Staten-Island, that on Thursday last, a Boat, which had lost her Mast, was seen to ride towards the S.E. of Coney-Island; she was seen yet all Day on Friday, but on Saturday Morning she was seen no more; so that it is supposed they were drove to Sea. As yet it is not known whose Boat it was, but there were Passengers on board.
